AGE AGENCY AMBIGUITY

– gender and generation
in times of change

CALL FOR PAPERS:

This conference focuses on gender and generations in times of social and economic change, in particular economic crises, migration and environmental challenges. Processes of industrialization, urbanization, deregulation, migration and globalization have had profound effects on gender and generational relations that display both differences and similarities in different national and regional contexts. These have far-reaching consequences on the conditions for gender equality work and feminist academic research practices.

The aim of the conference is to understand the multifaceted impacts of modernisation and crises on different age groups (Age), gendered strategies to deal with the impacts/changes (Agency) as well as the uncertainties people are facing (Ambiguity). The conference invites papers on a wide array of topics related to gender, generation and modernization. Papers may focus on different aspects of modernization of everyday life, for instance, family, work, education, youth, sexuality, reproduction, body and consumption, or on wider issues connected to human rights, feminist activism, politics, environmental challenges and sustainability. We invite papers that address these issues either in a single national context or by comparing different contexts. The aim is to understand modernisation and crises by comparing different parts of the world, however, each individual paper does not need to involve this comparative dimension, as the comparison will also emerge also across papers at the conference.
